Oral Language Skills
This year, the focus of our Site Improvement Plan is the development of oral language skills. In the early years, our focus is on the development of phonological awareness skills to enable students to hear the sounds in words. As our children get older, our focus moves towards using oral language to develop strategies for thinking and communicating.

Vocabulary knowledge is fundamental to being an independent reader, writer and thinker. It is a predictor of comprehension ability. Having a broad vocabulary allows students to process and discuss what they’ve read. It is also easier to read and spell a word if it is in your vocabulary.

Factors that influence vocabulary development:
- Opportunities to listen to and speak with a range of people about experiences, feelings, visuals, print and digital texts. Watching our students speak with visitors from the Proud Mary is an example of this.
- Listen to read–alouds of fiction and non–fiction texts especially when teachers clarify meanings of important words. Anne reads high quality novels to the Upper Primary class during Sip ‘n Crunch every day.
- Reading many fiction and non–fiction texts. As students read more words they are able to make connections between them. Teachers cannot compensate for a lack of reading progress. The Literacy Cup and Premiers’ Reading Challenge are strategies we use to build vocabulary by reading widely. Non–fiction reading is an integral part of subjects such as Science, History and Geography. Take home readers are a good balance between fiction and non–fiction texts.
- An increasing general knowledge about the world supports students to extend their vocab. Watching the news and documentaries is one way to extend vocab.
- Teachers having an interest in words and showing enthusiasm for learning new words. When you go into our classrooms you will see word walls, subject specific vocabulary and glossaries. They all help to build vocab.
- Developing a bank of ‘technical’ words supports students to write better non–fiction.

Another strategy we are working on is the difference between ‘fast thinking’ and ‘slow thinking’. Giving students some thinking time allows them to clarify their thinking before speaking.

RSL Luncheon
This year, the RSL changed their annual dinner into a luncheon. We provided a three–course meal for 80 participants. Thank you to everyone who helped by donating, cooking or working. A big thank you to Mary Gill and Nicole Cain who organised the function, Anne Martin for volunteering her time on the day and Sharleen Vandeleur who always rolls up her sleeves.

Amber Nutt had her parents fighting over who would work with her, and her Dad Chris won. Charlene Vandenberg proudly worked along side her children Paige and Brayden, and they were proud to work along side her.

We sent out forms recently asking for people to either donate, cook or work at our functions. Not as many have been returned as normally are, so if you have not seen the note or have just forgotten to return it please contact us. While lots of people have offered to donate, we still need offers to cook. This might involve cooking a couple of legs of lamb or an apple crumble.

The feedback from the luncheon was outstanding with our local member Adrian Pederick congratulating the school on our efforts.

Warm Regards, Rita

Counsellor’s Corner

Teach Your Kids to Shrug!

Michael Grose has written a book titled, ‘Teach Your Kids to SHRUG! and 40 more ways to raise your kids to thrive.’

'It was so irritating, yet so effective. When I was a boy, I had a good mate called Terry. Terry had a habit of shrugging his shoulders whenever anyone teased him or tried to persuade him to their way of thinking. ‘Hey Terry, you’re a %$%$!’ Shrug. ‘Hey Terry, everyone says you’re %$%$!’ Shrug. ‘Hey Terry, I’m going to tell on you.’ Shrug. His nonchalance used to drive everyone nuts ... so much so that Terry was rarely targeted for teasing, despite the fact that he wasn’t sporty, wasn’t cool and matured late (all of which back then, as today, put Terry in the ‘to be picked on’ category). I thought of Terry recently when I was coaching a young person about how to respond to some schoolyard taunts. It occurred to me that Terry’s shrugging said a lot more to the person about how to respond to some schoolyard taunts. It occurred to me that Terry’s shrugging said a lot more about him than I’d realised at the time. I’d thought he was pretty unflappable, but what I obviously didn’t understand was that he was also incredibly resilient. Terry was comfortable in his own skin; he knew who he was and how he was and cared very little what anyone else thought. Shrug was his way of getting on with life, whatever it served up.’ Michael Gross

Talk to your children about what they do if someone says or does something that may hurt their feelings.

If we teach our children that they are good enough and they are worth it, they will develop their own self worth and become resilient citizens of our world. It’s our job to set a good example for our children to follow. And remember, it is not always what we say, it is often what we do, that they get their cues from.

Cheers, Kerry

Sammy D Foundation

In Week 5, Neil Davis came in and talked to the Upper Primary class about the loss of his son Sam. In 2008, Sam Davis was at his friend’s birthday party but after several fights broke out, the party was cancelled. As everyone was leaving, an argument started between Sam and an uninvited guest. Another unwanted guest decided to king hit Sam from behind. This single punch left Sam lying on the ground without a pulse. After this tragic incident, Sam’s parents Nat and Neil decided to create the Sammy D Foundation in order to spread the word about how ‘One Punch Can Kill’. Neil showed the class a Powerpoint of photos that revealed Sam’s personality and his love for friends, family and his sports.
